

Dear FCC:

I would like a national do-not-call list. How can the telemarketers object to knowing ahead of time who doesn't want to be bothered?

Also, most telemarketing calls I receive show up as "unavailable" on my caller ID. I realize that at least one state forbids sending caller ID information (New York), but is there any possibility of REQUIRING telemarketers to broadcast the information?

Lastly, I'm tired of the predictive dialers hanging up on me when I answer the phone. Something needs to be done to either eliminate them, or monitor their hang-up rates so that excessive hang-ups can result in fines to discourage this sort of abusive marketing.

Thanks for listening,

-- Tom Kirby